Details:

Job Summary: The Recovery Outreach Worker is directly attached to the four supportive recovery beds at Ann Elmore House, extending the support women in the house into the community. By building relationships during residency, the Outreach Worker ensures continuity of care through coordinated transition planning, warm hand-offs to services, and individualized aftercare support following discharge. This role helps bridge gaps between residential recovery and community systems, strengthens access to resources and provides relational consistency during a high-risk transition period. Through community connections, advocacy and group facilitation, the outreach worker supports women to move forward in their recovery with increased stability, confidence, and support See attachment for more information
