Indigenous Parenting Support Worker JOB POSTING

Sasamans Society is seeking a dynamic individual with experience working with Indigenous families to join our team. This position is based out of Port Hardy 5 days per week at the Sasamans Society office.

The Indigenous Parenting Support Worker (IPSW) program offers vital preventive support to families identified as needing intervention, particularly where there is a risk of child removal due to safety or well-being concerns. The IPSW provides intensive, in-home parenting support, focusing on skill-building and goal-setting in collaboration with each family. Together, they create parenting plans and activities aimed at addressing the specific risks identified by the Ministry of Children and Family Development (MCFD). Acting as a supportive guide, the worker walks alongside parents on their journey toward achieving their goals. The IPSW also works closely with other members of the Sasamans team to ensure families receive holistic, wraparound support.
